I was an Explorer scout, one step above Boy Scout, and our post took a several day camping trip to a huge underground lake south and west of Tehran, I think. There were about 10 of us and we rode in several motor pool vehicles out into the arid, dusty expanse of a high plateau for a few hours until we came upon your standard Iranian village.

The ride home tonight with lights ablaze will be a bit of a test (although it won't be a late ride). Anyway, the new basket caused the biggest adjustment, and I'm not sure I'm totally done. The front lights I have are constructed on the assumption that a biker would hook them to a stem or handlebars—but because I put a large briefcase ...
